Dearest:

I am bothering you with still another letter but Luckings' breathless letters come in so fast from Casa Dorinda that they must be passed on to you equally breathlessly. You will, I know, be interested to see the pictures of the really beautiful blue echium that must have made the entrance to Casa Dorinda quite a spectacular sight. The three go to you with my fondest love. A report comes equally from Luckings that the Garden tour on the 19th was a great success and that the weeds in the old rose garden are disappearing thanks to their industrious cultivation, and that the change in the driveway near the "jungle" looks "grand".

Tell me if you have made any progress in thinking over the question of the little memorial to Gray which is to be put up by his fellow workers, and whether the place you thought of down by the stream appears as actually right when looked at on the spot as it did to you and me as we spoke of it telephonically.

Yours ever fondly,
