

Botanical Gardens and the Urban Future

Garden and Landscape Studies
Dumbarton Oaks Research Library and Collection
Annual Colloquium
November 2, 2018
The Oak Room, Fellowship House

9:00 – 9:20 am	Registration and Coffee in The Oak Room, Fellowship House
9:20 am	Introductory remarks by Anatole Tchikine, Curator of Rare Books, Garden & Landscape Studies
9:30 – 10:10 am	Peter Crane, “Botanical Gardens: History, Diversity and the Future of Plants”
10:10 – 10:50 am	Emma Spary, “Prospective Gardens in the Early French Empire, 1670-1730”
10:50 – 11:10 am	Coffee
11:10 am – 11:50 pm	Gerda van Uffelen, “Hortus botanicus Leiden: Past, Present and Future”
11:50 – 12:30 pm	Adriaan Geuze, “Contemporary Paradises”
12:30 – 2:15 pm	Lunch
2:15 – 2:55 pm	Hans-Walter Lack, “Berlin-Dahlem Botanical Garden: Botanical Scholarship and Botanical Representation”
2:55 – 3:35 pm	Finola O’Kane, “The Public Botanic Garden in the budding British Empire: The Ideal Subversive Suburban Space?”
3:35 – 3:50 pm	Coffee
3:50 – 4:30 pm	Mikyoung Kim, “Looking to the Future: New Paradigms for Botanic Gardens: The Regenstein Learning Center at the Chicago Botanic Garden and the McIntire Botanic Garden in Charlottesville, VA”
4:30 – 5:10 pm	Sheila Brady, “Designing Ecosystems at the New York Botanic Garden”
5:10 – 5:45 pm	Discussion, moderated by John Beardsley, Program Director, Garden & Landscape Studies
5:45– 6:30 pm	Prosecco

Programs in Urban Landscape Studies at Dumbarton Oaks are supported by a grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation through their initiative in Architecture, Urbanism, and the Humanities