BOSTON

Dearest Mildred.

The devoted Clemmy has added the duties of a Secretary to all her others so she writes you instead of my right hand.

It was good of you to telephone and I shall expect to see you on the 25th even if only for a few minutes as all my day is spent at the Hospital or in doing little things for Max.

He is not ill enough to have a nurse and the treatments are going on well; the days seem long to him, I sit with him
as much as possible.

My right hand is said to be the direct result of our work so I must learn to slow

up.

Forgive so short a note which would be longer if dear Lemmy did not have so much else to do for her helpless lady.

Yours ever my dearest
with fond love

J. K.
