Dear Mr. Sachs:

A few days ago Mrs. Bliss told me of your new great sorrow and of what it means, not only in the way of loss of companionship, but of help and support in your family. Please let me tell you how truly sorry Max and I are to hear of your loss.

---

As I look back on the date of your letter of December 29th, I realize how discourteous I must seem, or how careless. You are so quick in understanding the different problems at Dumbarton Oaks and the delicate balance that we are all trying to maintain between the different departments, that I look forward with keen pleasure to a repetition of our talk of last January some time in the spring, perhaps in mid-April when I hope to spend a few days at Dumbarton Oaks. If the mid-April dates do not suit you and it would be more convenient for you to have me stop in Cambridge on my way Maine and homewards, you can perhaps arrange to see me for half an hour, as all we shall need is to confirm and consolidate our ideas.

Yours sincerely,
