

October 16th, 1937.

Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss,
"Dumbarton Oaks,"
Georgetown, Washington, D.C.

My dearest Two:

You are such dear and considerate lambs, and so good to your tiresome old weak-kneed gardener, that of course I will come to Dumbarton on the 27th, and will let you know later by what train to expect me. I instinctively hold back from coming as I realize it is a nuisance to have a half-speed engine running alongside two express engines like you and Robert.

When you know if you think you will want me for two, three or five days, send me a wire either to the Hotel Windermere East, Chicago, where I shall be until Thursday, the 21st, or to the Princeton Inn, Princeton, New Jersey, where I shall be from Friday, the 22nd, till Sunday, the 24th.

It is good news to hear that Gray looks well. Thank you for the answers to the hurried letter sent you to the train.

The further news from France continues as considerate as E. knows how to be.

Always your devoted
